3 POSITIONS THAT HELP ACCELERATE AND GROW YOUR BUSINESS

In this report I want to share with you three precise positions that you can take that can help you to accelerate and grow your business. These positions can help you to actually break through the profit ceiling you may be currently experiencing. It doesn't matter if this ceiling is very low or very high.

Before I discuss these positions I want to explain something else and that is why strategy is necessary? Why is it that we must be strategic in business?

If I were to ask this question to a bunch of people I would probably get lots of different answers and I really don't think there is a right or wrong answer to the question. However, there is one specific answer that is one of the overriding reasons why we absolutely must have a strategy in business. If we were to go on instincts the majority of the time we would probably be wrong.

When faced with a challenge in life or business people tend to do one of two things. This is referred to as the fight or flight syndrome. People will either try to fight it out or run away from it. This is not the way to win especially in business. This is not how you will grow your business or expand it. You don't want to fight because the moment you do, You will push people back.

You don't want to run because if you run away from a challenge you are not going to grow nor will you be able to advance your position.

Another reason why it is important to have a strategy in business is because of the fact that most people will default to two of the absolute worst positions. One of these is to be copy cat and the other one is to directly compete. You might see someone doing something great so you try to copy it or you are going to try to compete on better sameness.

You put yourself in a position where what it is you come up with leads to people resisting it. This is not what you want. You want to make sure that you take up a position in your business that people actually want to support and even want to help you advance.

You don't want people to resist you. You don't want them to push up against you because that is not going to get you anywhere. That is the exact position that you take up when you become a copy cat or you decide that you want to compete directly with someone because you like what they are doing. You have to keep in mind that better sameness has hardly ever won the game. That is not the route that you want to go.

What Is The Route That You Want To Go?

I'm going to give you three very distinct positions that you can take. Every single person that I've worked with personally or in groups that have understood these three positions, have significantly grown their

What Are The Three Positions?

Grab your pencil and paper.

The first one is an enhancer.
The second one is a complimenter.
The third one is an enabler.

I'll give you some quick examples:

I invited a small group of our clients and friends over to do a seminar. I like doing them as small groups because I get better interaction. During this group seminar we went over these three different positions and one of the people that was there is probably one of the most intelligent guys I've met in recent times. His name is Nichol and he's from Australia.

Nichol decided that he wanted to take up the position as complimenter because he doesn't have his own product. His whole thing was how can I complement other people's products whilst following their strategy so that I can make more money and more sales.

To make this long story short, Nichol decided to do just that and he decided to sell someone else's product that was $1,400 a pop. He decided to sell it through Pay Per Click because he didn't have his own list to use.

I won't give you the utilization of the strategy, because I don't want to give it away. What you need to understand is that he took up the position of a complimenter. As a result of that in four days he sold over $86,000 worth of products. He did this because of how he put himself in a position as a complementer.

Not only that, as a result of some of the other stuff that we covered in those two days his business has added an extra $70,000 per month in revenue. This was because he chose to be one of the three positions that I just gave you.

You can be an enhancer, a complementer, or an enabler. When you take up the position as someone that is complementing, enhancing or enabling, you are doing so with an existing product or service. This means that you are putting yourself in a position where you are not competing with somebody that already has a certain amount of attraction out there but you are putting yourself in a position where they will probably have a higher probability of supporting what it is you are doing as opposed to resisting what you are doing.

You can have the mindset where you decide to go after the people that are already writing checks. There is nothing wrong with this and this is a very smart thing to do. The real thing though is that it is not just what you do; it is how you do it. That is a very important sentence so you might want to reread it.

You want to go after people that are already writing checks because they don't have to be sold on this. They already understand the value. It is already a part of their life.

They are part of someone else's value network and you will want them to start writing checks or swiping credit cards in your direction.

The worst thing you can do is try to copy an existing offering or to try to do something that directly competes with them. It's not that you can't win doing that but it's just going to cost you more resources to do that.

If you take up the position as someone that's an enhancer, that's a complementer or an enabler you'll find that it becomes the path of least of resistance and a path where you can experience success much faster.

Think about an enhancing situation.

What does Dolby Digital do? It basically enhances the home movie watching experience.

What are some of the situations you can think about in your life or in general where you see something as an enhancement to a certain experience and that's the reason why people are buying it?

What about a complements?

What about ice cream and cake? Don't those kind of, complement each other?

What about an enabler?

Think about how a CD player actually enables you to play CD's.

Here's something else. You hear people talk about the upsell and they use McDonald's as an example. The frustrating thing about that to me is that a lot of people talk about it, but, they don't really articulate why the upsell to McDonald's actually worked. They talk about the mechanics to ask somebody "do they want something else?"

That's not how it works strategically. That's the mechanics of it but the reason why McDonald's upsell works is because they're always offering you something that enhances compliments or enables. Think about it, a super size is what? It's enhancing your experience in eating all of this food. If you want some fries, why not get a ton of fries? If you want a soda, why not get a bigger soda?

They're enhancing the experience you're about to have. The apple pie, what does the apple pie do? It probably compliments the entire meal. I want you to think about that. When you go and you ask for a burger, why is it they put together those particular Happy Meals?

It's like you ask for a Big Mac and they say, "Well, would you like a number 3?" Which is like the whole combo because the soda and the French Fries do what? They compliment and they enhance the overall experience. That's why it works.

I want you to think about how you can actually enhance, compliment or enable in your business.

Here's a simple way you can do that. I want you to pull out a piece of paper and I want you to draw a pyramid on that piece of paper. In the center of that pyramid I want you to write the name of a competitor

McDonald's, Big Mac and Happy Meal names are all trademarks of the McDonald's corporation and its affiliates or the name of an existing product or service in the market that you're in or you're looking to get into.

On each of the three points of that pyramid I want you to write enhancer, completer and enabler: putting one of these words on each of the points. Then, I want you to brainstorm ideas by asking simple questions. How can I enhance this existing product or service? How can I complement this existing product or service? How can I enable this existing product or service?

Don't try to filter out any ideas. Don't come up with any excuses or buts. This is not the time to start filtering your ideas. What you want to do is to have a stream of consciousness and a stream of thoughts.

You want to come up with as many ideas as you possibly can that will help you to position yourself as an enhancer, completer or enabler. Believe it or not, this has been one of the secrets and how I have basically went from no place to someplace in my life.

When I was in the financial markets I didn't come up with proprietary software like a lot of these other guys were out there doing. I was using things that had already existed in the trading market space. I was using indicators that had been around long before I was even born. What I did though was I put them in a package and I positioned them in such a way that it enhanced the user experience. It enhanced what traders were already doing. It enabled them to use things that they already had.

I also put myself in a position where I complemented things that these traders already had, because I had an understanding of what it was that they were doing.

Where it is they were looking to get to and where it was they were at that particular time.

What are you currently experiencing in your business? When you think about your position is it of an enhancer, a completer or an enabler.

If you are not experiencing a great deal of success in your business can you now see how you become an enhancer, a completer or an enabler of an existing product or service how that will open up whole new doors to you. Can you see how all of these will open up amazing partnerships, amazing joint ventures and all kinds of great things?

If you are a completer, an enhancer or an enabler of something that already exists you do one of the most powerful things that someone that already has an existing business will love. You show people how to consume more of what it is they already have.

That's an extremely powerful result and an extremely powerful point of value that you can offer to somebody that has an existing business, an existing database and they're currently selling existing products and services.

Look at how you can become an enhancer, a completer and an enabler and your business and success will soon follow.
